

and in several ways, Sony Electronics Inc. has demonstrated a strong interest in the education of children.

Sony has been an active participant in all five of my annual TechFair education-high technology symposia. TechFairs bring local high school students together with San Diego's leading high-technology employers and researchers. The students learn about career opportunities in high technology, and speak one-on-one with men and women who work in high-technology fields every day. They learn what kind of education they need to succeed in the good paying, high-technology careers of today and tomorrow. This year's TechFair, held at the new Scripps Ranch High School, featured a demonstration of Sony's new digital satellite communications technology. Partly as a result of Sony's longstanding commitment to technology in education, the 1995 TechFair was the biggest and best ever.

They have also sponsored the 24 Challenge mathematics competition I initiated with San Diego schools.

I have also had the privilege of addressing students participating in Sony's Student Project Abroad. Under this program, Sony selects top math and science from around the country in an educational and cultural exchange. They spend 2 weeks visiting Sony plants in San Diego and Japan, and learn about high-technology manufacturing.

Most recently, on October 12 and 13, Sony participated in a distance learning conference based in Johnston, IA, with Gov. Terry Branstad and other State and local officials. They explored and shared ways to affordably link rural areas, particularly our schools, through new telecommunications technologies.

The future of our work to expand the technological literacy of the next generation of Americans depends not on larger Federal programs run from Washington, or on an expansion of the huge national debt. Our promise lies in the ingenuity of individuals and private enterprise, and companies like Sony, who are willingly volunteering their personnel and expertise to inspire and teach tomorrow's scientists and engineers.

SALUTING THE CONGREGATION OF THE SALEM LUTHERAN CHURCH OF ROSEHILL, TX

HON. JACK FIELDS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 30, 1995

Mr. FIELDS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, faith is a wonderful but mysterious thing. It enhances our lives when times are good, and sustains us when life seems almost unbearable. Faith in God and love for one's fellow man are two of the most valuable gifts a person can possess.

The men, women, and children who attend the Salem Lutheran Church in Rosehill, TX, realize that their faith springs from within. They recognize that their church's foundation is built on more than brick, concrete, and glass. They understand that that foundation is built upon the faith, the kindness and the compassion of each and every one of the church's members.

Sadly, I must report that on the evening of Tuesday, November 21, a four-alarm fire destroyed the sanctuary of the Salem Lutheran Church. More than 25 fire trucks from Rosehill and nearby communities responded to the blaze, and only because of the decisive action of one fire fighter was the church's family center saved from destruction.

Mr. Speaker, Salem Lutheran Church is the oldest Missouri Lutheran Church in the State of Texas. When founded in 1852, Salem Lutheran Church was the first church in the Tomball area, which then was known as Peck. In 1870, the one-room sanctuary was transformed into the Salem Lutheran School, with students in grades one through eight attending. A new sanctuary was erected nearby.

Despite its long and proud history, Salem Lutheran Church has also known tragedy and heartache. In 1964, the church pastor and his wife were killed in an auto accident. Then, several months later, the church burned to the ground. Finally a new structure was built, and it was dedicated in 1967.

Now that the sanctuary is gone, church services will be held at Salem Lutheran School. The 2,000 members of the church's congregation can look forward to better days ahead, however.

Even before the November 21 blase, the church had begun a new, 2,000-seat sanctuary, which, when completed, will be the largest Missouri Synod Lutheran Church in Texas. While construction of the new structure will continue for at least another year, I am confident that the congregation of Salem Lutheran Church will get through this difficult time because of its faith.

No one knows why this latest disaster has struck Salem Lutheran Church. When adversity strikes, we often ask ourselves what we did to arouse God's wrath. The fact is that God has a plan for each and every one of use who believes in Him, including the men, women, and children who attend the Salem Lutheran Church.

This latest tragedy, no matter how difficult it is for us to understand, is a part of that plan. And that knowledge will, I hope, sustain senior pastor Wayne Grauman; administrative pastor Doug Dommer; pastor of care and counseling Craig Whitson; and the entire congregation of the Salem Lutheran Church of Rosehill in the weeks and months ahead.

Mr. Speaker, I know you join with me in keeping the congregation of the Salem Lutheran Church in our thoughts and prayers, and wishing them a full and speedy recovery from this most recent tragedy.

TRIBUTE TO ANETA CORSAUT

HON. HOWARD L. BERMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 30, 1995

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, we are honored to pay tribute to Aneta Corsaut, a dear friend, who died much too young from cancer this November. Aneta was a spirited, warm, and lovely woman who had a heartfelt compassion for others. Those who knew her well were touched by her selflessness and feelings of empathy. She was a special person, and we will miss her very much.

Born in Hutchinson, KS, Aneta came to southern California in 1950's to pursue her dream of being an actress. She landed a part in "The Blob," which has become a science fiction cult classic and, later, had a recurring role on the Andy Griffith Show as Helen Crump, Andy's girlfriend. Whether on the New York stage—where she started—or a Hollywood soundstage, Aneta found success in a profession that is notoriously difficult. All of her friends were so proud of her accomplishments.

But there was another side to Aneta, a side that brought her into our world. Aneta had a passion for politics, especially Democratic Party politics—a rarity for a person from Kansas. We would like to think that her political affiliation was a direct result of her selfless, caring nature. Most important, she was an unapologetic liberal to the end.

We both had the good fortune to work with Aneta. Her dedication to causes and issues was heartening. At a time of widespread cynicism and apathy Aneta was the perfect counter, a living, breathing example of how essential it is for people to get involved. We—all of us—need more Aneta Corsauts in this world.

Mr. Speaker, we ask our colleagues to join us today in saluting Aneta Corsaut, whose life is an inspiration to all. We were lucky indeed to have known her.

TRIBUTE TO PENN HIGH SCHOOL

HON. TIM ROEMER

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 30, 1995

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to the 1995 State of Indiana Class 5-A football champions: my alma mater, the Penn Kingsmen. On Saturday, November 25, Head Coach Chris Geesman and the Kingsmen completed a perfect 14-0 season by crushing favored Evansville North 35-13 in the State final.

Penn's second State football championship marked the end of what might be considered the most spectacular title run in Indiana playoff history. The last seven teams which Penn faced had a combined record of 55-8. Not only did the Kingsmen emerge victorious in each of these games, they did so by an average score of 25-6.

For the season, which marked Penn's 23d consecutive winning year, the Kingsmen outscored their opponents by a total of 424-84 and finished with a plus-36 turnover ratio. In the final, their Wild Bunch defense forced five turnovers, which the Gold Rush offense converted into victory.

I would also like to commend Penn quarterback, Matt Geesman, for being the recipient of the coveted Phil Eskew Mental Attitude Award. Matt is more than a talented quarterback and team leader. He is also an extraordinary student who is first in his class with a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would once again like to congratulate Coach Geesman, the assistant coaches, and the entire team on their first State football championship since 1983. Few people thought this team had what it took, but in the end, hard work, unselfish play, and flawless execution combined to bring the Indiana Class 5-A trophy to Mishawaka.
